Vice President, Business Development

ABOUT

Julie is the Vice President of Business Development at Briotix Health, where she is responsible for building relationships with potential clients and providing service solutions which promote the musculoskeletal health of client's workforces.

She brings a blended love of science and business acumen. Her professional education includes a doctoral degree in Physical Therapy from Temple University, a master's degree in Physical Therapy from Arcadia University, and a bachelor's degree in Biology and Anthropology from James Madison University. She received additional ergonomics certification through Ergo Web, Roy Matheson & Associates (CEES), and The Back School of Atlanta (CEAS).

From 2000-2015 she founded and ran a national ergonomics consulting firm, Ergo Concepts. As President and CEO she provided thousands of assessments, trainings and management. This entity was merged with Briotix Health in 2015. She is a licensed and board-certified physical therapist in the states of VA and MD and brings clinical expertise in the orthopedic realm, with a focus on foot biomechanics.
